The animation Farewell, created by Chu-Lin Hus, describes 28 last polar bear on Earth saying farewell on a melting iceberg before it drowns. Over the past few years, the number of polar bears 29 been in decline not only because they have been over-hunted by humans and badly affected by air and water pollution, but also because they 30 now 30 by global warming. Because of global warming, 31 Arctic ice is melting away, and Polar bears have fewer places to inhabit and less food to eat. 32 that they could disappear within decades.

If compared with other natural disasters, global warming influences our planet 33 a rather gradual pace. Regardless of its slowness, it still destroys the Earth. How does global warming happen anyway? It is caused by the burning of fossil fuels. The carbon dioxide 34 from vehicles and factories traps the sun's heat in the atmosphere and 35 it 35 escaping into space, thus warming the Earth. 36 the planet getting warmer, tons of ice surrounding the North Pole and the South Pole has begun to melt, 37 in worldwide sea levels rising. Small islands and low coastal areas could soon be underwater, and many people may have nowhere to live by the end of the 21st century. So, it's time that we joined hands and took action to stop global warming; otherwise, it will soon be our turn to say goodbye to the Earth.

V. Reading Comprehension 8 % (每題 1 分)

After school, you go home and log in to Myspace. You post some of your pictures and mention the school you go to. It seems innocent enough, but now everyone in the world can find out what you look like and how to find you. You never know who is looking at your social networking page. Remember these safety tips the next time you log in to a social networking site, such as Myspace or Facebook.

Posting things like your real name, address, and telephone number will allow strangers to figure out who you are and how to find you. In serious cases, people can use your information to get credit cards, make a purchase, and even scam others in your name. Since it is difficult to control who can access the information, it is best not to post it at all.

Also, in most cases, you should avoid posting pictures of yourself. If anyone can access your photos, it is a simple task for them to copy them and use them in offensive ways.

Needless to say, Myspace, Facebook, and other social networking sites all offer different ways to protect your privacy. You can choose who can look at your profile. It can be open to everyone or just a select group of friends. To avoid meeting people who have bad intentions, try limiting your profile as much as possible.

There is nothing wrong with making new friends online as long as you are careful. Many people online lie about who they are, so don't be too quick to trust someone, even if they seem nice. Be especially suspicious if anyone asks to meet you in person. It is best to simply refuse to meet since there is no way of knowing whether that person is honest or not.

Last but not least, trust your gut. If someone is making you feel uncomfortable online, never just laugh it off. Consider telling someone like the site's administrator about it and cut off contact with that person. On the Internet, it is always better to be safe than sorry.

On September 5, 1945, a group of American military planes flew over the Caribbean Sea on a training mission called Flight 19. It was a bright, sunny day, and everything seemed normal as usual. But later, the planes disappeared and the pilots on the mission were never seen again.

Flight 19 took place in an area known as the Bermuda Triangle. For over 100 years, tales have been told of ships and planes disappearing without a trace in the region. Why does it keep happening in this particular patch of ocean? Some say it's the work of aliens. Others say it is simply a coincidence. But now, we may have the real answer.

Two Australian research scientists say they have solved the mystery of the Bermuda Triangle once and for all. According to them, the sea floor in the Bermuda Triangle is rich in natural gas reserves. This gas escapes from the sea floor, and rises, expanding as it makes its way up in the form of a bubble. This is where ships and planes may run into trouble.

The scientists ran tests in a lab using a large water tank and ship models. They found that when a gas bubble breaks the surface of the water, it can be strong enough to sink a ship passing over it.

So that could explain how the ships go down. But what about the planes? The gas will continue to rise and expand after leaving the water. If a plane enters that gas cloud, it could cause the plane to lose its life and crash into the ocean. This theory isn't without critics, but it could explain one of the world's greatest mysteries.

52. What is the passage mainly about?

- (A) The mysterious disappearance of Flight 19 planes.
- (B) A new explanation for the mystery of the Bermuda Triangle.
- (C) Natural resources discovered in the Bermuda Triangle.
- (D) Scientific efforts to explore the Bermuda Triangle.

53. What do we know about Flight 19?

- (A) It was supposed to be a routine mission.

(B) Nineteen planes took part in the mission.

(C) It took place more than a century ago.

(D) Only one pilot survived the mission.

54. According to the two Australian scientists, what might have caused the disappearances in the Bermuda Triangle?

(A) Unpredicted weather.

(B) Swift and strong ocean currents.

(C) Natural gas from the bottom of the sea.

(D) The region's strange magnetic fields.

55. According to passage, which statement is TRUE?

(A) So far, more than 100 vessels have disappeared in the Bermuda Triangle.

(B) Some believe aliens are to blame for the Bermuda Triangle disappearances.

(C) The Australian scientists' theory has gained widespread support from fellow scientists.

(D) The Bermuda Triangle is rich in many different types of natural resources.
