The Ivy League (常春藤盟校) is a group of eight universities in the Northeastern United States. It includes Brown University, Cornell University, Columbia University, Dartmouth College, Harvard University, Princeton University, Yale University, and the University of Pennsylvania. These respected schools were well-known for their sports, so in 1954, they set up a league, a collection of sports teams, to compete against one another.

The idea dated back to October 1933 when Stanley Woodward, a sportswriter for New York Herald Tribune, used the phrase “ivy colleges” to describe these schools. He noticed these colleges shared the feature that they had many old buildings covered with ivy, a climbing plant with dark green leaves. Therefore, he wrote that some eastern ivy colleges would be meeting to play football. Many writers then used this phrase to describe the older colleges along the northeastern coast of the United States. Later, these colleges joined together to form a sports league and became known as the Ivy League.

Nowadays, the colleges of the Ivy League still compete in sports. The athletes (運動員) from the Ivy League even took home a total of 15 medals (獎牌) in the 2012 Summer Olympics in London. In addition, the Ivy League schools are also considered the top colleges in the United States and have high admission (入學許可) standards. A student must have excellent grades to be accepted. As a result, a person who graduates from one of the Ivy League schools is thought to have received the best education available in the United States.

26. According to the passage, which school does NOT belong to the Ivy League?
- (A) Harvard University.      (B) Stanford University.
(C) Dartmouth College.      (D) Princeton University.
27. How many medals did the athletes from the Ivy League win in the 2012 Summer Olympics?
- (A) 12.      (B) 13.      (C) 14.      (D) 15.
28. According to the passage, which of the following is NOT true?
- (A) There are eight universities in the Ivy League.
(B) The Ivy League got its name from a sportswriter.
(C) The Ivy League is not as famous as before in the field of sports.
(D) The Ivy League was founded in 1954.
