(A) 26. Although it is traditionally associated with Chinese culture, the holiday is celebrated all across Asia.

The Moon Festival, or Mid-Autumn Festival, is a harvest holiday that is based on the legend of the moon goddess Chang'e. In the traditional story, she swallowed some magic liquid and then went to live on the moon.

27. Friends share moon cakes, which are typically filled with sweet bean paste, salted egg yolk, or both. The cake's round shape is similar to a full moon and is a symbol of fullness and reunion with family. 28. such as lantern exhibitions and stage performances.

Besides enjoying moon cakes, many people in Taiwan celebrate the festival by eating barbecue, though this is a relatively new tradition. 29. when local barbecue sauce companies wanted a way to promote their products!

提示語句：

- (A) In addition to moon cakes, people commonly enjoy exciting public activities,
- (B) In Chinese culture, food is very important to Moon Festival celebrations.
- (C) In fact, the practice started only about 40 years ago,
- (D) Many Asian countries celebrate the Moon Festival, but practices are different across cultures.
- (E) People in Taiwan know the Moon Festival as a time to gather with close family and eat delicious food.

(B) Skimming and Scanning are two techniques that help readers get information from a text quickly.

30. For example, if you're in a bookstore and you're trying to decide if a particular book is interesting or not, then you might read the title, the description on the back cover, and the first few lines on the first page. The information gathered from skimming can help you decide whether the book is worth reading.

❖ How to skim

To skim a text, first read the title and subtitle (if any). Then, quickly read through the first few lines or paragraphs, paying close attention to any keywords, which are often bolded or italicized. 31.

Scanning is reading fast to find specific information in a text. For example, if you wanted to check a train's schedule on an electronic board at a train station, you would scan the board for your train number and locate the information you need.

❖ How to scan

Before you begin scanning a text, 32. If you have no clue about the text's purpose or meaning, then it will be hard to look for specific information through scanning.

Next, since scanning involves searching for specific information in a text, keep what information you're searching for in mind.

Finally, 33. If the text is divided into sections by subheadings, then the text will be easier to scan. If there are no subheadings or other types of divisions, then skim each paragraph to understand its overall meaning and determine whether the information you're looking for might be found there.

提示語句：

- (A) Keywords can give you a general idea of the text's overall meaning.
- (B) skim it first to get a general idea of what the text is about.
- (C) Skimming is reading fast to gain a general understanding of what that text is about.
- (D) Their skill lies in knowing what specific information to read and which method to use.
- (E) pay attention to how the text is organized.

(B) Is the Earth round or flat? It is a myth today that people from long ago commonly believed that the Earth was flat. In fact, some people even claim that Christopher Columbus had sailed to America because he wanted to prove to everybody that the Earth was actually round. However, historians know that this is just a rumor, and that people in Columbus's day were aware that the Earth was round. In fact, in the 6th century BC, the Greek scientist Pythagoras wrote a book that described the Earth as a round object. This fact alone challenges the false belief about ancient people. However, even if people from the past did not read this book, there were visible clues about the Earth's shape. If a person stood on land and watched a boat at sea coming toward them from far away, they would see only the top of the boat at first. As the boat sailed closer, they would see the rest of it. This and other clues suggest it was easy for people to know that the Earth was not flat.

37. What is this passage mainly about?

- (A) A historical fact
- (B) A natural phenomenon
- (C) A belief that few people hold
- (D) A commonly believed, but false idea
