The discovery of fire is something we often take for granted. However, fire is extremely important to all people in the world.

By the time modern humans evolved*, fire __1__ as a major tool by early humans. It provided warmth, and thus humans wouldn't __2__ on cold nights or during winters. But more importantly, it served as a source of light __3__ so that human activity could continue in the dark. Without it, humans would have been limited to their climate and surroundings. Fire could be made almost anywhere, __4__ humankind move into those areas they otherwise could not have gone. Moreover, at a time when humans did not know about bacteria, cooking meat helped prevent serious illnesses. By killing bacteria through cooking, people could eat without falling ill. The use of fire and smoke also enabled people __5__ extra dried meat for later. Lastly, fire came to be an important form of protection since it could scare off unwanted guests or enemies. Believing it to be a sign of danger, some groups of people would avoid it.

Fire is the most important discovery in human history. We use it and see it every day, and it's one of the most incredible* achievements in human history. (註: evolve 演化 incredible 極好的)

Recently, David Cantwell, a doctor based in New York, decided to approach his job from a fresh angle. He spent time getting to know his terminally ill child patients better. The goal was to discover what __11__ them up and makes them happy. Although this added to his workload, it enabled him to make several surprising discoveries.

__12__, the children didn't seem to especially enjoy watching television. __13__, none of them told Cantwell they wished they'd spent more of their lives in front of the TV. By contrast, the sick children all seemed to have great love for their pets. Cantwell reported that many of his patients talked at length about things their pets did that filled them with warmth. Furthermore, most of the children expressed __14__ gratitude toward their parents. Finally, the children were united in their love of stories. Both Harry Potter and Sherlock Holmes were mentioned alongside happy laughter by several patients.

Such love and passion expressed by such sick, __15__ children can serve as inspiration for us all. In a busy modern world, we would all do well to make time for the things that really make us happy and feel alive.

Prometheus created humans. He also gave them fire to keep warm, cook food, and make tools. He loved humans, __16__ this created problems between him and the king of the Olympian gods, Zeus. Prometheus __17__ a bull and created two offerings. One was beef hidden inside a bull's stomach, and the other was some bones covered in shiny fat. Zeus chose the one with the fat, thinking there would be juicy meat underneath. Because of that, humans could keep the meat for themselves. However, this made Zeus __18__, and he took fire away from humankind. Prometheus then stole fire __19__ the sun and gave it to humans. Unfortunately, Zeus punished the Titan by chaining him to a rock. He also sent an eagle to __20__ Prometheus's liver. The liver kept growing back, and the eagle kept eating it. In conclusion, Prometheus is called the champion of humankind for the help he offered humans.

(A) However, many others simply waited in the underworld for the day when they would be reborn.

(B) The underworld was the home of the Greek god Hades, who ruled over all dead souls.

(C) If you had been buried without a coin, your soul would be stuck in the river, and very few managed to swim across.

(D) One important myth involves a river named the Styx.

Long ago, the ancient Greeks believed in a variety of myths*. Many of these myths involved gods, heroes, and fearsome monsters. __21__ The river Styx was said to have separated the worlds of the living and the dead. Very few people knew much about the Styx because one had to be dead in order to cross it and arrive in the underworld. __22__ It was said that upon death, one's soul arrived at the river Styx, where a boatman called Charon would then take that soul across to the other side on his boat. The boat ride was not free; your family had to bury you with a coin to serve as payment for Charon. __23__ Therefore, if you became stuck in the river, you might be trapped there forever. If, on the other hand, you managed to get across the river safely, one of several things could happen to you.

Some people were sent to the underworld as punishment if they had lived a life of evil. __24__ Such people waited for the right body to appear in the world of the living; they would then be born again inside that body as an infant*, and the entire life cycle would begin again. How do you like your eggs cooked? There are a variety of ways to prepare them. You can make fried eggs, scrambled eggs, boiled eggs and more. In 2021, more than 86.3 million metric tons of eggs were produced worldwide. Those eggs were eaten by hungry people around the world. Among all nations, Japan is number one when it comes to eating eggs. The average person there eats about 320 eggs per year. In fact, people in Japan get most of their protein from eggs.

It is delightful to eat eggs, but how much do you know about them? Both the white and the yolk are delicious. They contain about the same amount of protein, too. Egg whites are more popular because each one contains just 15 calories. Egg yolks, on the other hand, contain around 55 calories. It takes a hen between 24 to 26 hours to lay one egg. Some types of chickens lay colored eggs. The Araucana chicken lays eggs that can be blue or light green. And you can tell what color the egg will be by looking at the color of the chicken's earlobes. (SC 9/20, 21)

25. What do we learn in paragraph two?

- (A) Chickens have very good hearing.
- (B) Egg whites are considered to be high in calories.
- (C) Eggs are usually blue before they turn white.
- (D) It takes about 1 day for a hen to lay an egg.

第31至33題為題組

In the United States, people who volunteer in hospitals are traditionally known as “candy stripers.” This term comes from the red-and-white-striped uniforms worn by female volunteers, which look like candy canes. Candy stripers are often people who have recently graduated from high school or college or those who have retired. Their motivation for volunteering may simply be to help their community, or in the case of students, to learn more about health-care professions before deciding whether they want to pursue a career in this field.

When I was in my third year of high school, I volunteered as a candy striper for one summer at my neighborhood clinic. I didn't have any plans to become a doctor or nurse, but I wanted to do something useful instead of spending another summer in front of the TV or just hanging out with friends. Working under the supervision* of a nurse, I filed documents, visited patients to make sure they were comfortable, and helped change bed sheets. Even though it was hard work, volunteering at the hospital was a valuable experience because it taught me how to care for others.

Today, hospital volunteers no longer wear red-and-white-striped uniforms, and many volunteers are male. However, one thing that hasn't changed is people's desire to offer their services to hospitals.

註: supervision 指導

31. What is the first paragraph mainly about?

- (A) A kind of candy called candy stripers.
- (B) The history of nurses' uniforms in the United States.
- (C) Hospital volunteers in the United States.

Dear Bopsy,

It's been two years since you left me. I know it was never an easy task for a young boy like you to fight leukemia*. However, you never complained about the pain, and you always stayed positive in spite of your illness. You are my true hero! (註:leukemia 白血病)

Toward the end, I always thought about how to make your last days count. I'm so glad I found some people who were willing to fulfill your wishes. The Make-A-Wish Foundation helped me to raise funds to organize a trip to Disneyland and ride in a hot-air balloon. I will never forget your cheerful smile when you met the cartoon characters at Disneyland. I also loved when the Phoenix Fire Department crew made you a fireman suit and took you for a ride in their fire truck, for you had always wanted to become a firefighter.

I often think of one moment a few weeks before you passed away. You knew I was upset about your condition, so you said something to comfort me. You said you would always be my guardian angel and that you would take care of me. I believe you will, and I'll never forget about you. You remain alive in my mind.

Love,
Your Loving Mom
